

Prof. Dr. Anwar Ma'ruf, M.Kes.

Dean of Faculty of Vocational Studies Universitas Airlangga

It has been very hard for all of us getting through this unprecedented time. Things we used to do before the pandemic will never be the same now. Adjustments are needed here and there to keep carrying out our activities in the safest way possible.

Since 2020 when the pandemic was officially declared in Indonesia, educational institutions were forced to stop most of offline activities. Students had to stay home, and most of learning activities have been conducted virtually since then. Despite all the changes, the most important thing to underline is the pandemic will never stop us to learn and explore new things.

Faculty of Vocational Studies, Universitas Airlangga actualizes the spirit by offering various international programs to international students around the world in the form of short courses and webinars held by three departments: Department of Health, Department of Business, and Department of Engineering. Those programs are expected to provide adequate exposure for our academicians and international students to engage in academic programs celebrating knowledge and building new skills through online platform. Lastly, we hope our programs could help sustain our collective efforts in creating meaningful academic platforms and broadening connection during the pandemic.
